

Szerzőink/Authors

Beatrix Bajnóczy is a language instructor at the Institute of English and American Studies of the University of Szeged. Her research interests include developing reading skills, learning strategies, TEFL, ESP, and English for business and administration.

Erzsébet Balogh is a teaching assistant at the Department of English Language Teacher Education and Applied Linguistics (ELTEAL) of the University of Szeged. She completed her PhD in English Applied Linguistics in 2014. Her research focuses on sociolinguistics and language attitudes, more specifically, she is interested in investigating non-English speakers' attitudes towards English accent varieties.

Judit Nagy is a teaching assistant at the Institute of English and American Studies of the University of Szeged. She received her M.A. at the University of Szeged and is currently working on her Ph.D. dissertation in the English Applied Linguistics Programme of the Linguistics Doctoral School of the University of Szeged. Her research interests include non-native Englishes, discourse intonation, speech perception, bilingualism, and translation studies.

Ilhana Škrgić obtained her Master's degree in Linguistics in 2011. She works both as an English teacher at the elementary school „25. novembar“ in Velika Kladuša, and as a professor of English language and literature at the University of Bihać, Bosnia and Herzegovina. She is a 3rd year PhD student of the Postgraduate University Study Programme in Linguistics at the Josip Juraj Strossmayer University of Osijek, Croatia. Her first poetry collection “Thanatonaut“ was published in 2012, and her second collection “Memento Amores” in 2014.

Júlia Szelivánov is a 3rd year PhD student in Intercultural Linguistics, ELTE University, Budapest. Her main field of research is multilingualism and protection of languages in a global context. Being currently on a research leave, she has worked in different sections in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Hungary, mainly with a specialization in United Nations and UNESCO. She is also a literary translator having publications of translations from Spanish, French, Italian and Biblical Greek into Hungarian.

Ágnes T. Balla is a senior assistant professor at the Institute of English and American Studies of the University of Szeged. She obtained her doctoral title in the English Applied Linguistics Programme of the Linguistics Doctoral School of the University of Szeged. She is primarily involved in English language teacher education and her main field of research is third and additional language acquisition and learning.