

AUTHORS OF THE BOOK

Kamila Baraniecka-Olszewska studied ethnology and Latin American studies. Since 2007 she has worked in the Institute of Archaeology and Ethnology of Polish Academy of Sciences, since 2014 she has been a head of the Department of Ethnology and Anthropology in the Institute. Her main subject of interest is anthropology of religion and performance studies, and especially forms of religious expression. In 2011 she defended PhD thesis on Polish Passion plays at the Warsaw University. Now she starts a new project on historical reenactments in Poland. She is an author of several articles dealing with contemporary religiosity and with perceiving and representing history, she also wrote a book on Passion plays published in Polish Ukrzyżowani. Misteria męki Pańskiej w Polsce. (kamila.baraniecka@gmail.com)

Gábor Barna is professor of the Department of Ethnology and Cultural Anthropology, University of Szeged and leader of the ethnological doctoral programme. Since 2013 he has been the head of the MTA-SZTE Research Group for the Study of Religious Culture (Szeged) and the SIEF's Working Group Place-lore and Space-lore. He is the editor of the publication series of the mentioned institutions and the academic foreign language journal Acta Ethnographica Hungarica. In the last two decades he published several articles and books on contemporary pilgrimages, laic religious societies, veneration of saints, contemporary beatification processes, national/state feasts and festivalization. (barna@hung.u-szeged.hu)

Neven Duvnjak (PhD) is research associate in the Institute of Social Sciences Ivo Pilar–Center Split (Croatia). He is teaching at Academy of Arts, University of Split. Some of his main works are: Religious Freedom in Contemporary Croatia, The Catholic Church and the Challenge of War: The Croatian Trial, Religious Tourism as a Particular Socio-Cultural Phenomenon, Orthodox in Croatia after 1990. Empirical Research Findings and Muslim Community in the Republic of Croatia. Currently he is working on the project Croatian Identity and Multiculturalism in the Age of Globalization. (ipdi-cst@st.t-com.hr)

Lina Gergova is assistant professor at the Institute of Ethnology and Folklore Studies with Ethnographic Museum at Bulgarian Academy of Sciences. She received PhD in Folklore Studies at the Institute of Folklore, BAS. She is a specialist in the field of everyday and festive urban culture in post-socialist space. She has many specializations abroad (Austria, Italy, Slovakia, Estonia) and teaching experience in Bulgaria, Lithuania. She was a Marie Curie fellow in Estonian Literary Museum – Tartu, working on urban festivity (2010-2012). Author of the book Ethnic Stereotypes in Everyday Culture. (lina.gergova@gmail.com)

Aleksandr Golozubov has PhD in Philosophical Anthropology and Philosophy of Culture (1996) and DSc in the Postmodern Cultural Studies (2010). He is professor of the Cultural Studies Department, National Technical University, Kharkiv, Ukraine. His research interest includes Postmodern Cultural Studies, Religious Anthropology, New Medievalism and Franciscan Studies. He published several articles and books, including Теология смеха как феномен западной культуры (Theology of Laughter as the Phenomenon of the Western Culture) and The Franciscan Concepts of Joy, Laughter and Foolishness in the Post-Modern Context. (aleksandr_golozubov@rambler.ru)

László Attila Hubbes is a Lecturer in Semiotics and Rhetoric at the Sapientia Hungarian University of Transylvania, at the Faculty of Technical and Social Sciences in Miercurea Ciuc, Romania. He holds a BA in Hungarian and English Philology and an MA in Sociolinguistics, both from the „Babeş-Bolyai” University, and he defended in 2006 his PhD thesis in Literary and Art History and Aesthetics at the same institute. His main field of research is apocalyptic studies, with a study volume and several international publications in the field. In recent years, he is also involved in the research of contemporary myths, discourses of various religious and nationalistic communities, particularly ethnopaganism. (hubbeslaszlo@gmail.com)

Aleksandar Ivanović was born in Montenegro. He has an MA Degree in Nationalism Studies from Central European University, Budapest. During and after his studies, he was engaged in the topics of political movements in Southeast Europe, football hooliganism as a sociological phenomenon, and business integrity in Southeast Europe. (aleksandarivanovic1986@gmail.com)

István Kósa, is associate professor of Sociological Theories at Sapientia University, Romania. He received his PhD in Philosophy from University of Debrecen, Hungary in 2002, an MA in Sociology from University of Bucharest in 2011. He is author of the book Thinking and Solidarity. He has published articles in philosophy, on news comprehension and online news preference. His current researches focus on online news preference and social psychology of speed perception. (kosapityer@yahoo.com)

Eva Krekovičová (Dsc.) is research professor, ethnologist and ethnomusicologist at the Institute of Ethnology, Slovak Academy of Sciences. From 2002 to 2006 she served as executive director of the Interdisciplinary Center of Excellency, SAS, which focused on collective identities in modern societies. She regularly teaches at Comenius University, Bratislava. Selected books: Zwischen Toleranz und Barrieren: Das Bild der Zigeuner und Juden in der slowakischen Folklore; Mental images, stereotypes and myths in Folklore and in Policy; and (in cooperation with G. Kiliánová and E. Kowalská) Us and the others. Collective identities in modern societies. (kreko@chello.sk)

Ildikó Landgraf is senior research fellow at the Institute of Ethnology Research Centre for the Humanities, Hungarian Academy of Sciences. She was awarded with the CSc degree in 1998 for her work "Heroes and hero-types of the 19th century in Hungarian Folklore. Lajos Kossuth and Hapsburgs." She is author of books and numerous articles on Hungarian historical legends, anecdotes, folklore of the Hapsburg dynasty, legends of the 1848-49 War of Independence and folk-narratives of omens and prophecies. (landgraf@etnologia.mta.hu)

András Máté-Tóth is professor and head of the Department for Study on Religions, University of Szeged. Holds PhD from University of Pécs (Hungary) in Science of Communication and from University of Vienna in Catholic Theology where he was awarded with Habilitation in 1996. He has been the leader of more international researches, including Religion and Values in Central and Eastern Europe Research Network (REVACERN) and the Aufbruch 1-2 (New Departures) project with Paul M. Zulehner and Miklós Tomka. Holds courses at Szeged University and at Vienna University. His main research interests are the mutual interaction between social and religious turns in Central and Eastern Europe, the research for theoretical interpretation of contemporary religious processes, and new religious movements and Christian grassroots movements in Europe. Author of numerous books and articles in English, German and Hungarian. (matetoth@rel.u-szeged.hu)

Kjetil Rå Hauge is associate professor at the Department of Literature, Area Studies and European Languages, University of Oslo. He is interested in Bulgarian syntax, semantics and pragmatics, comparative linguistics and corpus linguistics. His most important books are A Short Grammar of Contemporary Bulgarian, A Dictionary of Turkisms in Bulgarian and Transforming National Holidays: Identity Discourse in the West and South Slavic Countries 1985-2010 with Ljiljana Šarić and Karen Gammelgaard. (k.r.hauge@ilos.uio.no)

Dan Podjed is a research fellow at the Scientific Research Centre of the Slovenian Academy of Sciences and Arts and an assistant professor for cultural and social anthropology at the University of Ljubljana, Faculty of Arts. Since 2012 he has been a coordinator of the Applied Anthropology Network of the European Association of Social Anthropologists (EASA). In 2011 he published his book Observing the Observers, which was awarded by the Slovenian Research Agency as the most important annual scientific achievement in ethnology. He co-edited two books (Creation of Spaces and Cultural Heritage of the Past for Our Brighter Future) and published several articles in national and international journals. He writes about internet celebrities, human-technology interaction, online social networks and organizational cultures. His latest research focused into hypervisibility in contemporary world. (dan.podjed@gmail.com)

István Povedák is research fellow at MTA-SZTE Research Group for the Study of Religious Culture (Szeged). Studied History, Ethnology and Religious Studies at University of Szeged, Hungary. Holds PhD from ELTE University, Budapest for his dissertation Heroes and Celebrities. He is interested in the contemporary cult of heroes and celebrities, vernacular religiosity and the mingling of neonationalism–Christianity–neopaganism. He has numerous articles on these topics, including the books Álhősök, hamis istenek? Hős-és sztárkultusz a posztmodern korban (Pseudo-Heroes, Fake Gods? The Cult of Heroes and Celebrities in Postmodernity) and Sámán sámán hátán. A kortárs pogányság multidiszciplináris vizsgálata. (Shaman on Shaman's Back. The Multidisciplinary Analysis of Contemporary Paganism). He is the head of the Ethnology of Religion Working Group of the International Society for Ethnology and Folklore (SIEF). (povedakistvan@gmail.com)

Francesca Rolandi obtained PhD in Slavic Studies at the University of Turin in 2012. Her PhD thesis investigates the influence of Italian popular culture in Yugoslavia and its role of a filter for Western cultural products. Her current research focuses on the migration of Yugoslav citizens to Italy in the 1950s and 1960s. She was a research fellow at the Italian Institute for Historical Studies in Naples and a visiting fellow at the Centre for Southeast European Studies in Graz. (francesca.rolandi@gmail.com)

Ana Stefanova studied Psychology at Varna, Bulgaria. She received her PhD for her dissertation Analyticopsychological approach to the Bulgarian Folklore from Bulgarian Academy of Sciences – Institute of Ethnology and Folklore Studies with Ethnographic Museum (IEFSEM). She works in the field of the rituals and fairy tales, using the methods of the analytical psychology published several article in these fields, including Mythological way of thinking and archetypes in contemporary Bulgarian nestinarski ritual complex, Juliah Morning – How the Music Makes us Free Together and Riddles as a Community Psychological Phenomenon in Folklore: Myths, Fairytales, Personal Literature Art. (anastefanova@photo4art.com)

Maria Vivod is associate researcher in the Laboratory Cultures and Societies in Europe in Strasbourg. She defended her PhD from Ethnology (Ethnomedicine) in 2005 at the University Marc Bloch, Strasbourg. Gives lectures, makes documentaries and publishes in German, English, French, Hungarian, Serbian. Her most important works include The Charms of the charmer, bajalica Biljana, Die Beschwörerin (Bajalica) Biljana aus Budisava, Wojwodina. Rekonstruktionsversuche einer ethnischen Identität im postsozialistischen Nachkriegsserbien, and Eine Rekonstruktion von ethnischer Identität – der Fall der Beschwörerin bajalica Biljana aus der Wojwodina, Serbien and Biljana. Currently she is working on topics of memory (group/official v.s. individual), group cohesion and violence of non-state armed groups. (vivod@hotmail.com)

Csilla-Dalma Zsigmond is assistant professor in Sociology and Communication Studies at Sapientia University, Romania. She has an MA in Politology from the Corvinus University in Budapest and a BA in Sociology from the Babes-Bolyai University in Kolozsvár (Romania). She is co-author of the Szeklerland – in Numbers. She has published several studies in Hungarian and Romanian learned journals on political discourse-analysis, minorities media-representation, news comprehension and news preference. (zsigmondcsilla@sapientia.siculorum.ro)